

Atish Gonsalves is a social technologist, entrepreneur and the Global Innovation Director of the Humanitarian Leadership Academy based in London.

With a background in software engineering, AI and human-computer interaction, Atish's 18 years of experience includes leadership roles at technology and international non-profit organisations including the United Nations. Atish has consistently implemented successful educational-technology (edtech) solutions that have helped democratize learning for thousands of learners in difficult contexts.

Atish is also the founder of Gamoteca, a collaborative digital platform that enables organisations create their own mixed-reality learning games.

He is a global citizen, having lived in six countries and is a regular speaker at conferences and events on the role of technology-enhanced learning.